

ABSTRACT OF THE DISCLOSURE

An improved structure of a coffee maker that allows consistent coffee making starting from grinding the coffee beans is essentially comprised of a main unit; at the upper end of the main unit extending an arm; and at the lower end, a heating panel containing a heater; an opening being provided on the top
5 of the arm to be inserted with a funnel and provided with a grinder right beneath the opening; a basket with an outlet facing downward being provided at the end of the arm; a vacuum coffee maker including an upper and a lower bowls being placed on the heating panel; a temperature sensor being provided
10 on the lower part of the main unit to rest on the surface of the lower bowl; coffee beans falling through the funnel being ground by the grinder before falling through the basket into the upper bowl; water in the lower bowl being boiled to make coffee depending on the amount and flavor as preset.